Personal Information:

Personal Information encompasses any data related to a natural person.

It can directly or indirectly identify an individual, especially when combined with other available information.

Examples include names, addresses, phone numbers, and other personally identifiable details.

Anonymous Information:

Anonymous information refers to data that does not directly or indirectly identify an individual guest or user.

It cannot reasonably be used to identify a specific person.

Internet Protocol (IP):

Internet Protocol (IP) is the primary set of digital message formats and rules used for exchanging messages between computers.

It operates across a single network or a series of interconnected networks, using the Internet Protocol Suite (often referred to as TCP/IP).

Messages are exchanged as datagrams (data packets).
